

Ellis Glenn In Parkersburg.

Parkersburg News.

Ellis Glenn, the mysterious person who has acquired so much newspaper notoriety within the past few weeks, arrived in this city yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock on No. 12, in custody of Special Sheriff Jude Richardson. She was turned over to Policemen O'Neal and Weyer, who took her to the county jail.

She was no sooner lodged there than at her request she was taken before Squire Drennen. She was not represented by counsel, but personally waived examination and was bound over to answer an indictment at the next term of Criminal Court, for forgery. The bond was fixed at $3,000. Glenn could not furnish this bond, but intimated that she would be able to do so later. In the meantime she was reconsigned to jail.

In order to prevent a fiasco similar to that which occurred in the Illinois court, Judge J. M. Jackson declares his intention to have reputable physicians examine Glenn in order to decisively establish her sex before an indictment is brought.

During the proceedings in Squire Drennen's court, Glenn displayed much familiarity with legal processes and particularly showed an interest in the warrant scrutinizing that document carefully.

Glenn is still attired in men's clothes wearing blue trousers, gray slouch hat and a dark overcoat. She is of stylish build with a thin, sallow face, showing visible marks of worry and illness. She had refused food for a couple of days prior to leaving Hillsboro, and steadily declined to eat anything on the trip here, stating that she was sick. She ate a fair supper last evening at the jail.

It was not generally known that the Richardsons would arrive with their prisoner on No. 12, so that a very large crowd did not greet the arrival, but as soon as it spread about that Glenn was here, she was an object of much curiosity as she was taken through the city to the jail.

THE TRIP FROM ILLINOIS.

When Glenn was told to make ready to leave the Hillsboro jail she either actually collapsed or very skillfully pretended to go into a trance. She had to be conveyed to the railroad station in a cab. Arrived there she sank down upon a bench and remained perfectly motionless for a full half hour, while the party were waiting for the train. When told that the train had arrived, she braced up and walked aboard. On the train she curled up in a seat and covered her face and refused to say a word or be seen. Somehow it got noised ahead of the train that Ellis Glenn was aboard and at every station crowds of curious people thronged the the car trying to get a view of the notorious person. Glenn kept her face covered and the Richardsons respected her evident wish to evade public curiosity.

She maintained and still maintains a strict silence, beyond asserting that it is her twin brother who is wanted here, not herself. It is believed that silence is her one object and she will keep it up throughout, no matter what is done with her.

She asked for women's clothes before leaving Hillsboro, but this request was refused, the officers wishing to bring her back here in the same garb which she wore when here before.

Now that she is here, she will be furnished with feminine attire. She will also be placed in the female ward of the jail. She was placed temporarily in the insane ward until a place could be prepared for her.

There seems to be no doubt that the prisoner is the same Ellis Glenn who committed the forgeries in this county, William and Jude Richardson having no trouble in identifying her. She, however, persists in not recognizing anyone.

IDENTIFIED AS MOLLIE UHL.

It also seems almost certain that Glenn is Mollie Uhl-Rader, who formerly worked for Mrs. Ellis, on Depot street, and afterwards kept store on Seventh street and on the Sand Road.

A number of reputable persons who knew the Uhl woman, took occasion to see Glenn as she left the train and all unite in thinking Mrs. Uhl-Rader and Ellis Glenn as one and the same person. They say that while the face is somewhat altered by time and recent confinement in prison, the form and general appearance is the same. She is particularly identified as Mrs. Uhl-Rader by her walk, which is peculiar to a marked degree.

It is an interesting coincidence that Mrs. Bettie Cole, whose bank book was found in Glenn's possession, happened to be a passenger on No. 12 on her way from Wenona, Ill., to spend the holidays with relatives. Since Glenn's arrival here the jail has been besieged with curious parties wishing to get a sight of the prisoner, but no one has been allowed to see her from motives of idle curiosity.

AT THE JAIL.

After Glenn was taken back to the jail from the Squire's office the News representative saw her, but to the questions asked she replied once or twice in monosyllables and then walked away from the door of her cell and sitting down on the cot in the room, gazed out of the window. She looked tired and sick and had a painfully dejected air.

To the question whether she had had a hard trip, the prisoner simply answered, "yes."

When asked if she would talk about her case, the equally brief answer, "No," was gotten.

Glenn is about five feet in height and of slight build. She wears her hair close cropped, and at a casual glance, when dressed in men's clothes, would never be suspected of being a woman. She is anything but prepossessing, as she has been sometimes described; in fact, she is rather repulsive in appearance. There is a peculiar protusion of the lower lip which is unusually thick, similar to that which marks people whose upper teeth have been drawn.

Glenn has remarkably large hands and feet for one of her size and sex.

It is probably largely due to this that she so easily passed for a man.
